

Councilwoman Bonner Announces Free Education Seminar on Ovarian Cancer To Be Held at East Winds Inn Saturday, April 4

posted on 3/24/2009 8:39:20 AM

FARMINGVILLE, NY - Councilwoman Jane Bonner announces that a free education seminar on Ovarian Cancer Awareness Day will be held on Saturday, April 4 from 9 am to 2 pm at East Winds Inn and Spa on Route 25A in Wading River. The SASS Foundation for Medical Research is sponsoring this free education seminar to promote better understanding of ovarian cancer and the latest advances in detection and treatments.

"Today, cancer is one of the leading causes of death in the United States. Supporting the efforts of organizations such as the SASS Foundation and learning about this terrible disease can reduce the number of cancer deaths and reverse the trend," said Councilwoman Bonner.

The seminar will be moderated by Dr. Francis Arena, President and Co-Founder of The SASS Foundation and will feature workshops, a doctors' panel, and a vendor showcase.

Founded in 1986, the non-profit organization is dedicated to three aspects: research, patient care and education, and ultimately, to finding a cure. Every year SASS hosts free seminars, presentations, and workshops that are designed to help people reduce their risk of cancer by teaching about the latest prevention strategies, treatment therapies and patient-support options. This forum makes it possible for cancer patients and their families to consult with world-class cancer specialists, such as Dr. Larry Norton, absolutely free of charge.

Registration is required. Please visit www.sassfoundation.org (click Events, Register). For more information, call 516-365-SASS (7277).

Division of Public Information * Office of the Town Council

One Independence Hill • Farmingville • NY 11738 • Phone (631) 451-6595 • Fax (631) 451-6258